For statistical consulting within the Helmholtz Zentrum München the Institute of Computational Biology is looking for a

'Statistician'

Job Description:
- Management of requests for statistical advice
- Communication with customers on organizational and technical level
- Assessment of requests for effort and difficulty
- Conducting statistical consultation
- Writing statistical reports for applications for animal experiment proposals
- Designing and teaching statistics courses at different levels (beginner, intermediate..)

Your Qualifications:
- Studies of mathematics, statistics, bioinformatics, epidemiology or related subjects
- Very good knowledge in statistics and, ideally, bioinformatics; esp. in hypothesis testing, power analysis, experimental design, regression, statistical software, functional data analysis, ideally, analysis of NGS / RNA data
- Talent / experience in organizational tasks
- Experience of working with life scientists, ideally in writing statistical reports for animal experiment proposals and teaching experience, ideally in statistics and statistical software
- Fluent in written and spoken English and German

Our Offer:
- Working in an innovative, well-equipped and scientifically stimulating surrounding
- Further training opportunities
- Initial short-term employment contract for one year with a standard public service salary (TV EntgO Bund EG 12-13)

The activity involves special knowledge and experience specific to own scientific skills.

contact: Dr. Christiane Fuchs, Christiane.fuchs@helmholtz-muenchen.de

We are looking forward to receiving your comprehensive online application.